

ABSTRACT

A codec

A codec comprising a programmed digital signal processor and an accelerator core in which computation of a coding algorithm is divided between the digital signal processor and the accelerator core, computationally relatively intensive parts of a coding algorithm being performed by the accelerator core. In the preferred embodiment, the instruction set is optimised to perform CELP coding of speech signals.

10 (Designate Fig. 2)